

Tod Cooperman, M.D.

President and Founder
ConsumerLab.com and PharmacyChecker.com

Tod Cooperman, M.D., is a noted researcher, writer, and commentator on consumer health care issues and is the president and founder of ConsumerLab.com and PharmacyChecker.com. Recognizing a lack of quality standards and oversight in the dietary supplement industry, Dr. Cooperman founded ConsumerLab.com with Food and Drug Administration (FDA) scientist Dr. William Obermeyer. ConsumerLab.com has become the leading independent evaluator of dietary supplements, publishing reports for consumers and health professionals. ConsumerLab.com's test results are frequently cited in the media and peer-reviewed journals. Dr. Cooperman has been called as an expert witness by committees of both U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate to give testimony regarding the quality and regulation of dietary supplements. Responding to the rapid growth in online pharmacies, Dr. Cooperman founded PharmacyChecker.com, which independently evaluates online pharmacies in the United States, Canada, and worldwide. The company's Web site is also a popular drug price comparison site for consumers seeking low-cost medication from independently verified pharmacies. He received his combined M.D./B.A. from the Boston University School of Medicine's Six-Year Accelerated Program with a major in medical sciences and a minor in economics.